Hattenheim Nussbrunnen

The Nussbrunnen vineyard in Hattenheim has a south-southeastern exposure. The name derives from a »Brunnen,« or spring, that was surrounded by nut trees. The source of the spring is still visible today. It borders the site Wisselbrunnen and lies 87 meters/285 feet above sea level, well protected from cold northerly winds. Due to impermeable layers within the site's deep loess soils, the water supply is lateral and even in dry years always sufficient for a good water balance.

Hattenheim Wisselbrunnen

The origin of the site's name is open to theory. On the one hand, Wisselbrunnen could derive from »Wiesel,« i.e., weasel, or »Wiese,« meaning meadow. Others see an affinity with the Latin »fistula,« or pipe[s], in reference to the »Brunnen,« or spring, located there. The vineyard lies 100 meters/328 feet above sea level and faces south-southwest, an optimal position for absorbing solar radiation. Wisselbrunnen's light, Tertiary marl soils have a good water balance so that even in very dry years, grapes can ripen extremely well.

Brunnenkiste

Weingut Balthasar Röss has had holdings in the world-renowned »Brunnen,« or spring, sites Nussbrunnen and Wisselbrunnen for decades, and in recent years, we've also had a small parcel of the Marco-brunn site. In 2012, for the first time, we succeeded in producing three dry wines from these sites. The same was true in 2013. Three wines that couldn't differ more from one another and quite clearly reflect their origin. Enjoy a journey of discovery with our »Brunnenkiste« that contains wines from three of Germany's most famous vineyard sites. The 2013 Marco-brunn Riesling trocken is available exclusively in this special »Kiste« (wooden case).

Rüdesheim Berg Schlossberg

With an incline of 70%, Rüdesheimer Berg Schlossberg is the steepest vineyard in the Rheingau. Its name derives from the Ehrenfels castle ruins. The vineyards on the »Rüdesheimer Berg« – the steep slopes adjacent to Rüdesheim – particularly the protected Berg Schlossberg site, benefit from intense solar radiation. The slate and Taunus quartzite soils absorb heat during the day and gently release it during the night.

Rüdesheim Berg Rottland

Berg Rottland is a steep site with a slope of 33%. It is situated on the western edge of town, near the Rhine shoals known as the »Binger Loch.« The soils are quite stony, and vary within the site: slate, quartzite and gravel, partially covered with loess.

Sekte

»Von Unserm« – Der Rheingau Riesling Sekt

The cuvée for »Von Unserm« Sekt is composed of Riesling wines from selectively harvested grapes. These are top-quality sparkling wines – not least because they have been aged on the lees for at least 15 months.

In the traditional method, a so-called »dosage« is added to compensate for the fluid loss after disgorgement. It also lends the sparkling wine a distinctive note and determines the desired style (from brut to extra dry). As the name implies, no dosage was added to our »Zero Dosage.« It is completely dry. Sekt production is truly an art.
